DP World's Komatipoort inland container depot in South Africa, has become the first dry port in the region, east of Gauteng, following its licencing by the South African Revenue Service (SARS) as an approved bonded container depot.

Strategically located along the Gauteng/Maputo corridor, close to South Africa's border with Mozambique, DP World Komatipoort, will now offer customers the full spectrum of intermodal and warehouse services.

The location of the depot is also close to a fully-fledged South African Customs and banking infrastructure, which will facilitate South African customs clearance of goods at Komatipoort.

"The approval of our Komatipoort facility as a bonded container depot, is a 'game changer' for the Maputo corridor. This means that international container imports landed in Maputo port and destined for the South African hinterland, can now be moved under bond to Komatipoort, where full customs clearance can be provided and made ready for delivery across South Africa," said Christian Roeder, CEO of DP World Maputo.

"DP World's primary aim for the Komatipoort facility is to make the hinterland's supply chain faster, more reliable and provide total cost savings, by opening a superior supply chain routing for cargo owners", he added.

DP World Komatipoort's strategic location, full-service offering, and seamless link via the Maputo Corridor to DP World Maputo's modern and efficient container terminal, where there is no vessel and port congestion and with fixed berthing windows available to major shipping lines, offers customers considerable transport savings and the avoidance of delays for consignees in Mpumalanga, Limpopo and Gauteng.

This trade corridor also offers South African businesses based in the region export opportunities from DP World Komatipoort via Maputo to international markets anywhere in the world.

DP World Komatipoort, began operations in August 2019, and is part of Dubai-based DP World's international network of 127 business units in 51 countries across 6 continents.
