
InPost opens London office: expansion signals exciting growth in the UK

Here at InPost we've just opened our second UK office - in central London's vibrant Soho.

Our UK locker coverage has almost doubled in the last six months alone, and there are now approximately 140,000 individual InPost locker compartments installed across the UK for consumers to collect and return their parcels.

And while our presence continues to expand, so too does our team. In the last year, our UK headcount has tripled, with all parts of the business growing - and we don't expect this to slow down anytime soon!

As our network growth continues to accelerate, we're on track to install a whole raft of additional locker locations the length and breadth of the UK - with our goal being to have more locker locations in London, Manchester and Birmingham than there are Post Offices. We aim to have one of the largest automated parcel networks in the UK, with ambitions to install 10,000 locker units by 2024.

The Soho office will complement our existing warehouse and office space in Hemel Hempstead, and provides a vibrant and collaborative space for teams to come together and make our vision a reality. Our new office - which is 4,311 square feet - will house around 50 employees.

The office space includes bespoke meeting rooms and break out areas, and a boardroom available for the team to collaborate and come together. The site also offers a large lounge and shared courtyard for when a change of scene is required!

Our Soho office is the latest milestone in our UK growth plans, helping us to provide towns and communities with easily accessible, green delivery options - something that is imperative as we move towards the UK's net zero strategy.
